How can Architecture contribute to the health of Man?
Is Architecture called to satisfy only functional and material needs, or does it have the possibility of contributing to a wider response to the needs of Man?

Do the forms, the colors, the spatial articulation of the Architecture have a relationship with the vitality of Man, with his psycho-physical well-being or even with the development of his deepest individuality?

Starting from these questions, the Conference wants to contribute to the reflection on the relationship between Man and Architecture, paying particular attention to the theme of Salutogenesis and to that of Architecture as a potential health bearer to Man.
